HOPE AND ACTION FOR PARENTS OF TEENS AND YOUNG ADULTS

Suicide remains the second leading cause of death for youth and young adults, and one in five youth report having thoughts about ending their life. Parents play a special role in watching, listening and acting. While suicide can be a challenging topic to discuss, it has been proven that talking about suicide does NOT increase suicidal behavior. Rather, when initiated by trusted friends and adults, it sends the message that you care and want to help. Many teens who struggle with suicidal thinking keep their pain hidden, and as Dr. Pamela Morris explains, “suicidal thinking, whether it is the result of mental illness, stress, trauma, or loss, is actually far more common and difficult to see than many of us realize.”

Despite the truth of our Faith that God loves each of us infinitely and is in every person’s life, and that He has a plan for each one of us, we all sometimes struggle and suffer, including our children.
